

Biography

Adrian Schreiber

Adrian is a retired Naval Officer who made a second career as a construction manager for major New Jersey corporations and the City of New York. During his naval career he was the US Naval Attache in Chile during the regime of Salvador Allende. He has a Bachelors in Latin American History from Rutgers College and a Masters in Information Science from the Rutgers Graduate School of Communications and Information.

He saw his first opera (Die Walküre) in 1960 at the Old Metropolitan Opera and his second opera (Tosca) the same year in Asbury Park. He has been hooked on opera ever since and is an advocate of new music and contemporary opera. He is currently a private piano student of Dr. Sung Park at the Mason Gross School of the Arts. He also sponsors an annual scholarship in Print Making Excellence at the Mason Gross School of the Arts.
